

Solicitor apprenticeships

Updated 18 October 2024

Aspiring solicitors can qualify through a solicitor apprenticeship [https://www.instituteofapprenticeships.org/apprenticeship-standards/solicitor-v1-0], in England. All apprentices must pass the SQE and meet our suitability requirements to qualify as a solicitor. Solicitor apprenticeships are not currently available in Wales.

There are two different apprenticeship routes: the trailblazer apprentice and the graduate apprentice.

Trailblazer apprenticeship

Key facts

- Typically takes five to six years to complete and can be started post-A level.
- Offers an alternative to going straight to university and may suit if you want to 'earn as you learn'.
- As with all aspiring solicitors, you must pass both parts of the SQE .
- All the SQE training and assessments cost is paid for through the apprenticeship levy fund.
- At least 20% of the training (eg one day a week) such as studying for university undergraduate degree or SQE training takes place away from the office.
- The time spent working as an apprentice counts as the qualifying work experience [#qwe] you need to become a solicitor.
- You will have gained a level 7 qualification (equivalent to a masters degree) upon completion of the apprenticeship.
- At the end, providing you pass the SQE and meet our suitability requirements [https://news.sra.org.uk/solicitors/standards-regulations/assessment-character-suitability-rules/1], you can qualify as a solicitor.

Entry requirements

Many employers have their own requirements which will be posted on their apprenticeship advert. However, the recommended entry requirements are:

- 5 GCSEs, including mathematics & English - grade C or above (or equivalent) or grade 4 or above for those attaining qualifications in 2017 or afterwards.
- 3 A Levels (or equivalent) - minimum grade C.

Some employers also offer solicitor apprenticeships to individuals who have already completed some legal training. This could be a law degree, the Legal Practice Course or the Trailblazer level 3 paralegal apprenticeship. These candidates also need to complete all the elements of the SQE. However, depending on their experience and skills they may not take the full 5 to 6 years.

Graduate apprenticeship

Key facts

- This scheme can be used for graduates to complete their training as a solicitor.
- It typically takes two to three years to complete which counts as their qualifying work experience [https://news.sra.org.uk/become-solicitor/sqe/qualifying-work-experience-candidates/1].
- As with all aspiring solicitors, you must pass both parts of the SQE .
- All the SQE training and assessments cost is paid for through the apprenticeship levy fund.
- At least 20% of the training (eg one day a week) such as studying for the SQE takes place away from the office.
- At the end of the graduate solicitor apprenticeship, providing you pass the SQE and meet our suitability requirements [https://news.sra.org.uk/solicitors/standards-regulations/assessment-character-suitability-rules/1], you can qualify as a solicitor.

Entry requirements

You would need a level 6 undergraduate degree to join a graduate solicitor apprenticeship programme.

Employers taking on apprentices

If your organisation is interested in offering solicitor apprenticeships in England here are some tips and things to think about:

- Any law firm, in-house legal team or legal services provider can offer a solicitor apprenticeship.
- Employers work with a training provider to offer the academic study and learning needed.
- Financial support available from the Government through the apprenticeship levy - amount you get depends on size of your organisation but can cover up to 95% of costs.
- You can take on apprentices for the full six years or graduates for a shorter period (around two and half years).
- Hiring an apprentice can be good way to grow talent and develop your workforce - you can even offer apprenticeships to existing staff.
- Information and useful case studies are on the Government's apprenticeships website [<https://www.apprenticeships.gov.uk/employers>], to support employers and answer queries.
